THE ACADEMY TRAINING MISSION

The primary mission of basic training is to prepare students mentally, morally, and physically to advance into a field training program, assume the responsibilities, and execute the duties of a peace officer in society.

FOREWORD

The California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training sincerely appreciates the efforts of the many curriculum consultants, academy instructors, directors and coordinators who contributed to the development of this workbook. The Commission extends its thanks to California law enforcement agency executives who offered personnel to participate in the development of these training materials.

This student workbook is part of the POST Basic Course Training System. The workbook component of this system provides a self-study document for every learning domain in the Basic Course. Each workbook is intended to be a supplement to, not a substitute for, classroom instruction. The objective of the system is to improve academy student learning and information retention and ultimately a police officer dedicated to service and committed to safety.

The content of each workbook is organized into sequenced learning modules to meet requirements as prescribed both by California law and the POST Training and Testing Specifications for the Basic Course.

It is our hope that the collective wisdom and experience of all who contributed to this workbook will help you, the student, to successfully complete the Basic Course and to enjoy a safe and rewarding career as a peace officer serving the communities of California.

Introduction

Student workbooks

The student workbooks are part of the POST Basic Course Instructional System. This system is designed to provide students with a self-study document to be used in preparation for classroom training.

Regular Basic Course training requirement

Completion of the Regular Basic Course is required, prior to exercising peace officer powers, as recognized in the California Penal Code and where the POST-required standard is the POST Regular Basic Course.

Student workbook elements

The following elements are included in each workbook:

- chapter contents, including a synopsis of key points,
 - supplementary material, and
 - a glossary of terms used in this workbook.

How to Use the Student Workbook

Introduction

This workbook provides an introduction to the training requirements for this Learning Domain. It is intended to be used in several ways: for initial learning prior to classroom attendance, for test preparation, and for remedial training.

Workbook format

To use the workbook most effectively, follow the steps listed below.

Step	Action
1	Begin by reading the: Preface and How to Use the Workbook, which provide an overview of how the workbook fits into the POST Instructional System and how it should be used.
2	Refer to the Chapter Synopsis section at the end of each chapter to review the key points that support the chapter objectives.
3	Read the text.
4	Complete the Workbook Learning Activities at the end of each chapter. These activities reinforce the material taught in the chapter.
5	Refer to the Glossary section for a definition of important terms. The terms appear throughout the text and are bolded and underlined the first time they appear (e.g., term).

Chapter 1

Introduction to Investigative Report Writing

Overview

Learning need A peace officer's ability to clearly document the facts and activities of an investigation not only reflects on the officer's own professionalism, but also on the ability of the justice system to prosecute the criminal case.

Learning objectives The table below identifies the student learning objectives for this chapter.

After completing study of this chapter, the student will be able to:	E.O. Code

Investigative Reports and the Judicial Process

[18.01.EO2]

Introduction

As much as 40% of a peace officer's work involves writing. Good investigative skills can be diminished if officers do not have the necessary writing skills to record their observations, findings, and actions clearly and concisely.

Investigative report

An investigative report is a written document prepared by a peace officer that records in detail the officer's observations and actions as they relate to a specific event or incident.

Each investigative report is a legal document that becomes a permanent written record of that event or incident.

Judicial process

A suspect's freedom, rights or privileges cannot be taken away or denied unless there is sufficient cause to justify such action.

In order to ensure due process, officers, prosecutors, judges, etc., must have sufficient information and evidence to initiate or continue the judicial process and successfully prosecute or exonerate a suspect.

Investigative Reports and the Judicial Process, Continued

Officer's reports and the judicial process

The judicial process cannot function without the investigative reports written by the officers who have the direct knowledge of an event or incident.

An officer's report must present each event or incident in a complete and clear manner. Any investigation, arrest, prosecution, or other action taken must be initiated, supported, or justified by the information included in the report written by that officer.

Because peace officer's reports are so important to the judicial process, each one must be able to stand up to critical review and legal scrutiny.

Statutory requirement

State and federal statutes mandate that law enforcement agencies report certain events and incidents. Penal Code Section 11107 requires each sheriff or police chief executive to furnish reports of specified misdemeanors and felonies to the Department of Justice.

Such reports must:

- describe the nature and character of each crime,
- note all particular circumstances of that crime, and
- include all additional or supplemental information pertaining to the suspected criminal activity.

Although the statutes are directed at the executive level, officers in the field are the ones who carry out the task of writing the reports. It is those officers reports that contain the information that will eventually be forwarded to the Department of Justice.

Investigative Reports and the Judicial Process, Continued

Specified crimes

Specified misdemeanors and felonies that require investigative reports, as required under Penal Code Section 11107, include, but are not limited to:

- forgery,
 - fraud-bunco,
 - bombings,
 - receiving or selling stolen property,
 - safe and commercial burglary,
 - grand theft,
 - child abuse,
 - homicide,
 - threats,
 - offenses involving lost, stolen, found, pledged, or pawned property,
 - domestic abuse, and
 - sex crimes.

Failure to file a report

Peace officers have a legal and moral duty to investigate and report crimes or incidents that come to their attention. Failure to uphold this responsibility can have negative consequences for officers.

- Deliberate failure to report a crime may be considered a violation of agency regulations and grounds for disciplinary action.
 - Any officer who knowingly files a false report will be guilty of a crime. (Penal Code Section 118.1)

Ethics

All reports are to be true, unbiased, and unprejudiced. These are easy words to say, but sometimes hard to live by. It is not always easy to know or find out the truth. Clearly it is the peace officer's moral obligation to seek the truth, lying is wrong. Truth and public trust cannot be separated.

Agency policies

Different agencies vary in their policies, regulations, and guidelines regarding the roles and responsibilities of peace officers for writing investigative reports.

It is the responsibility of each officer to be familiar with and follow that officer's specific agency policies.

Uses of Investigative Reports

Introduction

Even though it is the officer in the field who gathers the initial information regarding a crime, that officer may not be the person who must use that information to make decisions regarding further actions. Those decisions are usually made by other people removed from the actual event. They must rely on the information in the investigating officer's report to make decisions.

How investigative reports are used

The investigative reports written by peace officers have many different uses within the criminal justice system and beyond.

The following table identifies a number of ways investigative reports can be used.

User needs

Investigative reports must take into account the needs of each potential user of that report. The report must provide not only a clear word-picture of the event or incident but also the critical information necessary for those users to do their jobs.

Report users

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report

Introduction

Peace officers are faced with a variety of events and incidents. The specific contents of an officer's reports must reflect that specific event or incident. Although the details may vary, there are six characteristics that all effective investigative reports have in common.

Characteristics of an effective report

No matter what type of investigative report is being written (i.e., arrest report, incident report, etc.) that report must be:

- Factual,
- Accurate,
- Clear,
- Concise,
- Complete, and
- Timely.

Peace officers can use the acronym FACCCT to help them remember these characteristics.

Leadership

In a free and democratic society, all segments of the criminal justice system are open to public scrutiny and subject to public record. A police report is often the first and most significant documented account of a possible crime. As such, the police report is a fundamental instrument of democratic law enforcement. Therefore, we place high value on our officers' ability to write good reports. A good report is one that the officer is proud of and will stand the test of time. It must be factual, clear, concise, and complete. Accuracy and attention to detail will provide others in the criminal justice system with a clear picture of what happened.

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report,

Continued

Factual

Critical decisions made based on an officer's investigative report require that each report be factual. Users of the report must have an exact and literal representation of the event or incident.

The factual report provides an objective accounting of the relevant facts related to the event or incident under investigation. Any conclusions made by the reporting officer must be based on objective facts. These facts must be articulated and documented within the body of the report.

Accurate

The decisions made and actions taken by the users of the report must be supported by accurate information. There must be no inconsistencies or discrepancies between what took place and what is documented in the officer's report.

If any specific information is found to be inaccurate, the credibility and reliability of the report itself may be jeopardized.

Accuracy is achieved by carefully, precisely, impartially, and honestly recording all relevant information.

Clear

An investigative report must speak for the investigating officer at a time when that officer is not present. There should be no doubt or confusion on what the investigating officer is reporting.

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report,

Clear

Clarity is achieved by the use of appropriate language and logical order. The following table identifies a number of factors that can affect the clarity of an investigative report.

Factor	Recommendations/Rationales
Organization of information	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Information is easier for the reader to understand when facts and events are presented in chronological order.• Events relating to the incident should have clear and logical ties to one another.
Language used	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Simple, common language will make the writer's meaning clear.• Readers do not need to be impressed, they need to be informed.• Slang or profanity should not be used unless it is in the form of an exact quote.
Writing mechanics	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A poorly written or sloppy report can imply poor or sloppy investigative skills.• Proper use of commas and other punctuation marks can help convey the writer's meaning.• Writing in the first-person will help the reader clearly understand who did what or who said what.• Pronoun use must leave no doubt in the reader's mind as to exactly whom or what the writer is referring.• Errors in spelling, word choice, or grammar can distract readers.• Handwriting must be legible.

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report,

Concise

Reports should be brief yet, contain all relevant information the users will need to do their jobs. Wordiness can make a report less readable and therefore less effective.

Accuracy, completeness, or clarity should never be sacrificed for the sake of brevity. The following table identifies a number of factors that can affect a writer's ability to write concisely.

Factor	Recommendations/Rationales
Word selection	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Statements should be direct and concrete.• Use of abstract phrases can confuse or mislead the reader.• Plain English is the most effective way to convey information.• Do not use a synonym for a word, merely to avoid repeating a word. Using the exact word may seem less interesting, but it will eliminate misunderstanding.
Sentence structure and grammar	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Sentences should be short yet complete (subject-verb-object).• Fragments can be misinterpreted or lead to confusion.• Long drawn out sentences can be confusing and misleading.
Relevance	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Only the information that will be needed by the user should be included in the report.

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report,

Continued

Complete

An officer's report must contain all the relevant information and facts the user of that report will need. If the user must contact the writer to gather additional information, the report is not complete.

A report is complete when...	Description
it presents a complete word-picture of the event or incident.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Descriptions are comprehensive.• Physical conditions are noted.• Users are able to visualize the scene.
there are no questions left in the user's mind regarding the event or incident.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Key information regarding the what, when, where, who, how, and why is recorded.• Facts are presented.• Statements are supported by details.• The order of events is clear and easy to follow.
the actions taken by officers are reported.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Actions are described.• Decisions are justified.• Statements regarding probable cause are present.
both supporting and conflicting information is presented.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Information that may conflict with stated conclusions or actions must also be included.• Investigators, prosecutors, etc. can only determine the merit of information that they are aware of.

NOTE: Report formats used by officers can vary. Some jurisdictions require that certain information be noted on a standardized form that is often used as the report's face sheet. Officers who use such formats must be sure that all relevant blocks or portions of the standardized forms are completed, even if the same information is duplicated in a later narrative.

Characteristics of an Effective Investigative Report,

Timely

No decisions can be made or actions taken if an officer's report does not reach the users in a timely fashion. Evidence can be lost, suspects or witnesses may disappear, and the support and good will in the community can be lost if action toward resolving a case is delayed.

Common characteristics

The following table illustrates the six common characteristics of an effective investigative report.

Characteristic	Well Written	Poorly Written
F actual	The victim could not provide additional information about the suspect.	The victim could not remember what the guy looked like but thought he was a minority. There seems to be a number of those around lately.

Introduction

To help you review and apply the material covered in this chapter, a selection of learning activities has been included. No answers are provided. However, by referring to the appropriate text, you should be able to prepare a response.

Activity questions

1. Why should the ability to take accurate field notes and to write effective investigative reports be personally important to a peace officer? Why is it legally important to the officer's agency?

When I stopped to check on the man, he appeared to be drunk. He was carrying a bag which contained a half empty can of beer. I asked him if he had been drinking and he said he had a few beers with a friend but was now on his way home. He also told me that the path through the park was a shortcut. I asked the man for ID and he produced his driver's license. I arrested the man because the man was drunk and had an open container of alcohol while being in the park after it was officially closed.

Introduction to Field Notes

[18.02.E06]

Introduction

The officers who investigate a crime or incident are responsible for providing the information other participants in the criminal justice system need to effectively do their jobs. Officers should rely on accurate sources of information when writing their reports.

Field notes

Field notes are abbreviated notations written by an officer in the field while investigating a specific incident or crime.

An officer's field notes are the primary source the officer will use when writing the investigative report. If the officer's field notes are incomplete, difficult to read, or poorly organized, they will be of little use to that officer.

NOTE: There are a number of formats and styles used when taking field notes. Officers should select the format or style they are comfortable with.

When to take notes

Field notes are recorded while information is fresh in the investigating officer's mind. They should be taken:

- at the scene of an event or incident,
 - when interviewing persons (e.g., victims, witness, suspects, etc.),
 - whenever an officer wishes to record specific facts for inclusion in the report, and
 - any time the officer wishes to remember specific details at a later time.

Important considerations

When determining what to include in their field notes, officers should consider the points noted in the following table.

Consideration	Explanation
Field notes are more reliable than an officer's memory.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• An investigative report is often written several hours after the investigation of a specific event or incident has occurred.• Certain types of information such as statements, times, observations, addresses, etc., can be easily forgotten or confused with other information if not recorded while still fresh in the officer's mind.
Field notes are the primary source of information for the investigative report.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Well taken notes provide officers with the detailed information they will need to have in order to accurately write their reports.• Well organized notes will help officers capture vital information regarding the events, persons, statements, and other information related to the investigation.

Detailed field notes reduce the need to recontact the involved parties at a later time.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Complete field notes should contain enough information to answer any pertinent questions about the incident or persons involved.
Field notes can be used to defend the credibility of an investigative report.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• An officer's field notes can be an indicator of that officer's thoroughness and efficiency as an investigator.• During a trial, an officer may be asked to identify the source the officer used when writing a specific report. If the officer relied on field notes the reliability and credibility of the report may be easier to defend.

NOTE: Field notes are discoverable in court. If kept, they should be prepared accordingly.

Information to include

Every event or incident is different; therefore, the facts and information the officer must gather will differ. An officer's field notes should contain the facts and information that will aid that officer in answering the questions what, when, where, who, how, and why.

Incident specific information

The type of crime or incident will also indicate what specific information is required for the officer's notes.

For example, specific information for a burglary may include, but not be limited to:

- point of entry,
 - point of exit,
 - property damage,
 - types and value of property taken,
 - description of suspect's vehicle,
 - nature and location of evidence collected, or
 - unique characteristics of the crime.

Notetaking Process During a Field Interview

[18.02.EO2]

Introduction

The effectiveness of an officer's investigation may be dependent on that officer's ability to obtain information and statements from the involved parties.

Interviews

An interview is the process of gathering information from a person who has knowledge of the facts an officer will need to conduct an investigation.

Role of statements

The field notes taken by officers during an interview must be clear, accurate and complete.

Statements can be critical in tying together the specific facts of a specific incident or crime. The existence of some crime elements may only be revealed within the statements of witnesses, victims, and the suspects themselves.

Before the interview begins

Before beginning any field interview, officers should prepare properly. The following table identifies a number of actions the interviewing officer should take.

Actions Prior to the Actual Interview	Guidelines
Separate the involved parties	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• If possible, move the person to a location where there will be no interruptions or distractions.• Focus the person's attention on speaking with the officer rather than interacting with others.
Establish rapport	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Tell the interviewee why the interview is being conducted.• Describe the interview process that will be followed.• Assure the person that by using this process, the officer will be able to gather that person's statement accurately.• Be courteous, considerate, and patient.• Control the interview by remaining calm and polite.

Recording the interview

Some officers may choose to use a small tape recorder while conducting an interview. Officers should be aware this may inhibit the person from talking freely. Electronic equipment can also malfunction, leaving the officer with little or no information.

Even if an officer is recording the interview, that officer should also take thorough and complete notes of the conversation.

Three step process

The most effective way for officers to gather clear, accurate, and complete information while conducting an interview is to use a systematic process. One such process involves the following three steps.

- Step One: Listen Attentively
Step Two: Take Notes and Ask Questions
Step Three: Verify Information

Step One: Listen attentively

In the first step of the process, the officer's focus should be strictly on the other person. The officer should be listening --- not taking notes.

The following table identifies a number of guidelines for officers during step one of the notetaking process.

Action	Guidelines
Ask the person to recount what has happened.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Allow the person to speak freely.• Have the person describe the incident just as that person understands it, using that person's own words.
Keep the person focused.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• If the person begins to wander from the specific topic, guide the person back to the subject (i.e., "You mentioned that..." "Let's go back to...").• Maintain eye contact and use nonverbal gestures (e.g., nodding the head) to encourage the person.

Step One:
Listen
attentively

Action	Guidelines
Listen carefully to what is being said.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Be particularly attentive to the essentials of the incident the person describes by including the:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- role of the person being interviewed (victim, witness, etc.),- type of crime, if any, that has been committed,- time of the occurrence, and- exact location of the person during the crime or incident.

Step Two:
Take notes
and ask questions

When the person has finished, the officer can begin to write information. The following table identifies a number of guidelines for officers during step two of the process.

Action	Guidelines
Obtain identification information.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Confirm the person's role in the event or incident. (e.g., victim, witness, possible suspect, etc.)• Note the person's:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- complete name,- address and phone number (home, cellular, work and email address), and- any other information necessary for identification purposes.

Ask additional questions.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Obtain detailed descriptions of property, suspects, etc.

Step Three:
Verify
information

For the investigative report to be reliable, the officer's field notes must be accurate. The following table identifies a number of guidelines for officers during step three of the process.

Actions	Guidelines
Review information with the person.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Repeat specific information to verify the information is accurate and complete.• Give the person an opportunity to add facts as necessary.
Ask for confirmation.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Have the person confirm important details such as:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- direct quotes,- time relationships,- information regarding weapons, or- physical descriptions.
Make modifications or corrections as necessary.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Information may have been initially recorded incorrectly because the officer:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- misunderstood something the interviewee said,- wrote something down incorrectly, or- the officer's wording may have incorrectly characterized the interviewee's statement.
Verify changes.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Once any changes have been made, the information that has been added or modified should be verified.

Opinions, Facts, and Conclusions

[18.02.EO3, 18.02.EO4, 18.02.EO5]

Introduction

An effective investigative report must be factual. It must present an objective accounting of the relevant facts related to the event or incident under investigation. An officer must be able to distinguish between opinion, fact, and conclusion.

Opinions, facts, and conclusions

The basis for determining relevant information requires peace officers to make the fine distinctions between an opinion, a fact, and a conclusion. The following table illustrates these distinctions.

	Description	Example
Opinion	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A statement that:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- can be open to different interpretations,- expresses a belief not necessarily substantiated by proof.	The victim was in pain.
Fact	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A statement that:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- can be verified or proven- has real, demonstrable existence.	The victim's arm was broken.
Conclusion	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A statement that is based on the analysis of facts and opinions.• Conclusions should always be accompanied with the supporting facts and opinions. Conclusions presented without supporting information may be considered unwarranted.	The victim was not able to explain what had happened because she was in pain due to her broken arm.

Factual
but irrelevant

It is possible for information to be factual yet still not be relevant to the incident or event being investigated. The following table illustrates points that are all factual but may or may not be relevant in an investigative report.

Factual and Relevant	Factual but Irrelevant
The address of the incident/crime scene	The route followed to the scene of the incident/crime
A description of how the suspect was apprehended	The number of fences the officer had to jump while apprehending a suspect
Statements given by witnesses	Humorous comments given by bystanders

Relevant and irrelevant information

The following are examples of relevant and irrelevant information.

Victim's Statement	Relevant Facts	Irrelevant Facts
"I just bought this bike from the guy down the street a couple of weeks ago. It wasn't new but it was in really good shape. After a long ride, I parked the bike in front of my building at the bottom of the stairs. I didn't bother locking it up or anything because I thought it would be safe there, you know."	The bike was left unlocked in front of the victim's residence.	I thought it was safe there.
"I went inside my apartment to fill my water bottle and was gone for less than 5 minutes."	The bike was left unattended for about 5 minutes.	The victim went into his apartment to fill his water bottle.
"When I came out, the bike was gone. I was really mad and started yelling and cursing. I looked up and down the street but didn't see anyone or any signs of my bike."	No suspect was seen or heard by the victim.	The victim yelled and cursed when he realized his bike was stolen.

Chapter Synopsis

Learning need Peace officers must recognize that the information gathered during their initial investigation in the field will become the foundation for their investigative reports.

Content of field notes When determining what to include in their field notes, officers should consider the following.

[18.02.EO6]

- Field notes are the primary source of information for the investigative report.
 - Detailed field notes reduce the need to re-contact the involved parties.
 - Field notes are more reliable than an officer's memory.
 - Field notes can be used to defend the credibility of an investigative report.

Taking notes during an interview The most effective way for officers to gather clear, accurate, and complete information while conducting an interview is to follow a systematic process.

[18.02.EO2]

Opinions, facts, and conclusions An opinion is a statement that can be open to different interpretations and expresses a belief not necessarily substantiated by proof. A fact is a statement that can be verified or proven and has real, demonstrable existence. A conclusion is a statement that is based on the analysis of facts and opinions. Conclusions should always be accompanied with the supporting facts and opinions. Conclusions presented without supporting information may be considered unwarranted.

Workbook Learning Activities

Introduction

To help you review and apply the material covered in this chapter, a selection of learning activities has been included. No answers are provided. However, by referring to the appropriate text, you should be able to prepare a response.

Activity questions

1. In your own words, explain what makes a fact relevant for the purposes of an investigative report. Are all relevant details facts? Explain your answer.

2. Using only your memory, recount exactly what you were doing from 1800 hrs. to 1900 hrs. two days ago. Write your actions as if you were taking field notes for an investigative report. How much of your account do you feel is exact? How much is speculation or assumption?

Read the following scenario and then answer the following questions.

At 2245 hrs., you were called to a local supermarket where a man was caught by the store's night manager attempting to shoplift a bottle of vodka. The suspect struggled and tried to hit the night manager in an attempt to escape.

Upon arrival, you handcuffed the suspect and walked him to the patrol vehicle. All individuals involved declined your offer for medical assistance. You asked the store's night manager, Joe Smith, to tell you what happened. Appearing shaken he told you the following:

“Well... let me get it together now... OK officer... I'm the night manager here and I was in the back when one of the clerks, Ester over there, came over and said there was this guy over in aisle three that was just hanging out and looking kind of suspicious. So, I went over there just to see for myself, and this guy saw me looking at him, so he started moving toward the front of the store. Well, I thought his coat looked funny, you know, like he had something under it so I kind'a followed him until I caught up and tried to make conversation, you know, to get a better look. You gotta be careful, you know... don't want to offend any legitimate customer, you know. Well, he turned around and looked at me and then instead of stopping, he just bolted for the door. He took off so I took off and he must of slipped or something cause he dropped the bottle of vodka he'd tried to get away with. I kept after him, still in pretty good shape ya' know 'cause I work out, and grabbed the guy's jacket. Well he spun 'round and before I could get any kind of grip on the guy, he belted me! Caught me a good one right here under my eye... still bleeding some I guess... but I didn't let go and I got him down on the ground, stuck my knee in his back, and I guess one of the clerks had called 'cause that's when you guys got here. So what happens now? Nothin' like this has ever happened to me before, ya' know.”

I wasn’t doing anything. I was goin’ to pay for the stuff, ya know, but the guy, he just started yelling so he’s the one that chased me out, ya know. Then the dude grabs my jacket so I swung at the guy. It was self-defense, man! I gotta right to defend myself, ya know!

Questions Answered by an Effective Investigative Report

[18.03.EO3]

Introduction

No matter how an investigative report is organized, it must be factual, accurate, clear, concise, complete, and timely (FACCCT). It must provide prosecutors, investigators, and other participants in the judicial process with the accuracy of the information needed to do their jobs.

Investigative report formats

An investigating officer communicates with the other participants in the judicial process through that officer's written investigative report. The adequacy of that communication is dependent on the officer's ability to logically organize events and clearly state the relevant facts related to the incident.

Agency policy

Each agency has its own policies regarding formats and forms officers must use when writing investigative reports. It is the responsibility of each officer to be familiar with and comply with their agency's requirements.

Community policing

Police reports have a variety of users in the community. Prosecutors, judges, insurance agencies, and attorneys all rely on police reports to ensure a fair and just outcome. A well-written report can be a significant tool in providing justice for victims. Police reports are useful in prosecutions, in defense against wrongful accusations, as a permanent history in long-term investigations, and in holding peace officers accountable when they are involved in the incident. The peace officer is the "eyes and ears" of the event. A good report will greatly increase the effectiveness of everyone involved.

Questions Answered by an Effective Investigative Report,

Primary questions

The users of an officer's investigative report should be able to locate the answers to six primary questions within the body of the report. These questions are noted below.

- What?
- When?
- Where?
- Who?
- How?
- Why?

If an officer is not able to answer a question, the report should provide as much information as possible. This information may prove vital for investigators assigned to the case.

Supporting facts and information

The information that answers each question will vary depending on the details of the specific incident or crime.

NOTE: The following table is not intended to be all inclusive. Specific crimes will require certain information that should be noted by the investigating officer in the report.

Introduction

Every incident is different and different crimes require different information. On the other hand, certain content elements remain constant regardless of the crime or the formats used to present the information.

Fundamental content elements

The following table identifies the fundamental content elements that are common within all investigative reports.

An effective investigative report contains...
initial information...	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• establishing how the officer(s) became involved with the specific incident and additional background information.
identification of the crime...	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• including the facts that are necessary to show that the specific crime has taken place.

officer actions...	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• including descriptions of all actions taken by peace officers that are related to the incident.

NOTE: The order in which information is presented in an investigative report is dependent upon the format used and agency policy.

Initial information

Each investigative report should describe the manner in which the peace officers learned of the incident. The initial information should also describe the officer's immediate observations and any actions they took upon arrival at the scene.

Content elements specific to the initial information may include, but are not limited to:

- the name(s) and badge number(s) of the responding officer(s),
 - how the officer(s) learned of the incident (e.g., radio dispatch),
 - the exact date and time the officer(s) arrived,
 - the exact location, and
 - details regarding the officer(s) own observations of who was where and what was happening upon arrival.

Identification of the crime

The facts which are the evidence of a crime are referred to as the corpus delicti, or the body of the crime.

Specific crimes have their own required crime elements. Investigative reports must clearly identify these facts in order to establish that a crime has occurred.

Crime identification information within the body of the investigative report must clearly state the:

- common name of the crime,
- statutory code reference number for the crime (i.e., Penal Code, Health & Welfare Code, etc.), and
- existence of each of the required crime elements necessary for the crime to be complete.

NOTE: Additional information regarding the crime elements for specific crimes is included in the supplementary materials at the end of this workbook.

Identification of involved parties

The involved parties of a crime can include the person who reported the incident, victim(s), witness(es), or suspect(s). Officers should take care to collect complete and accurate information that clearly identifies each as well as providing a means of further contacts if necessary.

Specific information regarding the involved parties should include, but is not limited to:

- full names,
- sex, ethnic origin,
- date of birth (DOB),
- home address,
- home phone, cellular phone,
- workplace, school or email addresses,
- workplace or school phone,
- their role in the incident (i.e., reporting party, witness, etc.), and
- the reporting party's relationship with other involved parties.

Witness/ victim statements

Statements of the involved parties (i.e., witnesses, victims) help place events in their proper sequence and establish the elements of the crime. Along with the person's statements, officers should note:

- location/proximity of the person to the event,
- circumstances and actions observed or experienced,
- complete and detailed descriptions, (e.g., items stolen, distinguishing features, injuries sustained, etc.) and
- information regarding suspect(s). (e.g., name, aliases, identifying marks, relationship to the victim, etc.)

If the reporting officers use a person's exact words within a report, quotation marks and the word said followed by a comma should be used to introduce the speaker's words.

Example: Smith said, "I don't know. I'd really have to take a closer look. I'm just not sure if that's all that was taken."

If the reporting officer paraphrases what the speaker said, quotation marks are not used.

Example: Smith said she was not sure if anything else was taken.

Crime scene specifics

The users of any investigative report should be able to clearly understand and accurately visualize the scene of the crime as well as the events that took place.

Investigative reports should include, but not be limited to, identification and description of:

- the physical condition of the scene itself,
- the chronology of events,
- location of physical evidence, and
- all information supporting the existence of the elements of the crime. (e.g., the point of entry, the location of key objects)

NOTE: Investigative points to be noted can vary based on the specific crime that is being reported.

Property information

Any item pertaining to the crime must be identified clearly and described within the investigative report. Such items may include stolen or damaged property as well as physical evidence.

Information should include, but not be limited to:

- brand names,
 - model/serial numbers,
 - description (including color, unique markings, dimensions, etc.),
 - value of stolen item,
 - identification of the owner/possessor/finder,
 - location where found (or stolen from),
 - relationship of the item to the crime/incident, and
 - physical evidence, including methods of collection and preservation.

Fundamental Content Elements, Continued

Officer actions

An investigative report is not complete unless it clearly identifies all actions taken by the officer or officers.

Officer actions to be noted can include, but not be limited to:

- stops made,
 - searches conducted,
 - seizures of evidence,
 - arrests made,
 - standard procedures followed (e.g., knock and notice, field showups, etc.),
 - Miranda admonishments,
 - use of force,
 - medical attention (offered, accepted, or refused),
 - safety measures taken,
 - disposition of suspects, or
 - methods used to preserve evidence or capture essential information.

Information in support of officer actions

Complete and accurate descriptions of an officer's actions should also include the officer's reasons or justifications for taking those actions. This can include, but is not limited to the:

- exigent circumstances that led the officer to act (i.e., enter without permission, use force, etc.),
 - basis for an officer's reasonable suspicion to conduct a cursory/frisk search for weapons,
 - probable cause to conduct any other authorized searches,
 - probable cause to seize evidence,
 - probable cause leading to an arrest, and/or
 - detailed information describing acts or conditions that justify the level of force used to gain or maintain control.

2. In order for the crime of vandalism (Penal Code Section 594) to be complete, the necessary crime elements include:
- an act of a person or persons
 - with malicious intent
 - to deface, damage, or destroy with graffiti or other inscribed material
 - personal or real property
 - not their own.

The following statement is an excerpt from an investigative report. Has the writer noted sufficient information to establish that the crime of vandalism has been committed? Underline the information that supports the existence of each element of the crime. If an element is not present, identify the information that is missing.

...As my partner and I approached the scene, we could see the spray painted markings on the windshield of a blue Ford Taurus, CA license number 12345, which was parked in the street in front of 9876 Rose Lane. The owner of the Taurus, Clyde Smith, who lived at 9876 Rose Lane came out of the house carrying two empty cans of spray paint that he found in the gutter three houses down, at 9870 Rose Lane...

On 01-5-08 at 1600 hours my partner and I were called to the scene of a residential burglary. The home owner, Alice Smith, met us as we arrived and gave the following information.

Smith left for work today at 0630 hours, locking all doors and windows. She returned home for lunch at 1130 hours and discovered the front door had been kicked in and was left standing open. She entered her home but found nobody inside. She discovered her TV and VCR were missing along with a home computer. Smith said that the only other items disturbed in the house were several books that had been knocked off a shelf in the office. Smith will attempt to locate serial numbers for the TV, VCR, and computer and forward that information to us.

Smith did not see anyone around her home, but did observe a blond male driving a red car. The driver was turning off her street, when she came home. Smith did not recognize the person and had not seen the vehicle in the area before. She could not provide any additional descriptions of the driver or vehicle.

Recommended Grammar for Investigative Reports

[18.04.EO1, 18.04.EO2, 18.04.EO3, 18.04.EO4, 18.04.EO5]

Introduction

Grammar may be defined as the rules and guidelines used by writers to make their message clear and understandable to the reader. There are a large number of grammatical guidelines in the English language and peace officers should be aware of them when writing investigative reports.

Proper nouns

A noun is a naming word. It can be used to identify people, places, or things. Proper nouns name specific persons, places or things and always begin with a capital letter.

When referring to a specific person within a report, officers should use proper nouns (Tom Smith, Alice Jones) to clearly convey to the reader whom they are writing about. After the full name has been used once, just the last name may be used when referring to the same person. (Smith, Jones)

Example: Tom Smith said he saw the woman leap from the deck and run across the yard. Smith went on to describe the woman as...

Pronouns

A pronoun is a word that substitutes for a noun or a proper noun. There are two types of pronouns of which writers of investigative reports should be aware.

Pronoun	Use when referring to the:	Examples of Pronouns	Examples of Use
First person	person writing the report.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• I/My/Mine/Me• We/Our/Ours/Us	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• I told my partner...• Our vehicle was...
Third person	person, place, or thing being written about.	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• He/His/Him• She/Hers/Her• It/Its• They/Their/Theirs/Them	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• He said that it was ...• She told her sister...• It was no longer present...• Their father was ...

NOTE: First person pronouns can also be used within quotes to refer to the person speaking. (e.g., Wilson said, “I ran as fast as I could.”)

Recommended Grammar for Investigative Reports,

First person pronouns

When writing investigative reports, officers should use first person pronouns when referring to themselves. By doing so, the reader has a clear understanding of what the officer actually did, observed, experienced, etc.

Referring to themselves as “the reporting officer” or “the writer of this report” or using third person pronouns can be needlessly awkward and lead to confusion as to who was actually doing what.

Example: My partner and I spoke with the witness about what they saw and heard during the fight.

Recommended Grammar for Investigative Reports,

Continued

Third person pronouns

When a third person pronoun is used within an investigative report, it must clearly refer to or agree with the noun or proper noun that is directly before it.

Alone, third person pronouns lack any specific meaning. It must be clear to the reader, exactly who, what, or where the pronoun is referring to.

The following table illustrates how the use of third person pronouns can lead to confusion within a report if not properly placed.

Confusing	Clear
Jones saw the man's car crash into the tree. He immediately reported the accident.	Jones saw the man's car crash into the tree. Jones immediately reported the accident.
Smith told his neighbor to get rid of the junk car he kept in front of his house.	Smith told his neighbor to get rid of the junk car the neighbor kept in front of his house.
After McFay gave her daughter the gun, she began to worry.	McFay began to worry after she gave the gun to her daughter.

NOTE: To avoid confusion, it may be preferable to repeat the proper name rather than use a third person pronoun

Past tense

Since most investigative reports are written about things that have already happened, the words that are used should clearly indicate the events have already taken place.

Verbs are words or groups of words which express action. A verb's tense refers to the time the action took place. A past tense verb expresses an action completed in the past. A present tense verb expresses an action currently taking place.

The following table illustrates some examples of present and past tense verbs.

Present Tense	Past Tense
He says his wife did kick him...	He said his wife kicked him...
I then have Officer Baker . . .	I then had Officer Baker...
She states her husband...	She stated her husband...
On 04-06-98 at 0735 hours I respond to a call...	On 04-06-98 at 0735 hours I responded to a call...
The suspect arrives at the scene...	The suspect arrived at the scene...

Active voice

The word “voice,” when used to describe a type of verb, refers to whether the verb is active or passive.

A verb is in the active voice when the subject of the sentence is the individual or thing that is actually doing or performing the action. A verb is in the passive voice when the subject of the sentence is someone or something other than the doer or performer of the action.

Officers writing investigative reports should use verbs in the active voice rather than the passive voice. Most readers find sentences written in the active voice easier to follow and understand.

The following table illustrates differences between using a passive or active voice in an investigative report.

Passive Voice	Active Voice
The victim was given the report form by me.	I gave the report form to the victim.
The seminar was attended by law enforcement personnel.	Law enforcement personnel attended the seminar.
The witness was talked to by me.	I talked to the witness.
The suspect was patted down for weapons by my partner.	My partner patted down the suspect for weapons.
The driver was asked for his driver's license by me.	I asked the driver for his driver's license.

NOTE: The subject of the sentence does not have to be a person. It can also be a place or thing.

NOTE: A common indicator of passive voice is the word “by” in the sentence.

Writing Clearly and Precisely

[18.04.EO6, 18.04.EO7, 18.04.EO8]

Introduction

Effective investigative reports must present all relevant information simply, or logically. They must be written in plain English in order to be useful for the reader.

Paragraph organization

Paragraphs are the structural units for grouping information. No matter which format is used for the investigative report (narrative or category), all paragraphs within the report must be clear and easy to understand.

When writing an investigative report, the first sentence (lead-in sentence) of each paragraph should clearly state the primary topic or subject of the paragraph. The sentences that follow within the paragraph should present facts, ideas, reasons, or examples that are directly related to that primary topic.

The following table presents examples of poorly organized and well organized paragraphs.

Poorly Organized	Well Organized
When we arrived, the husband let us into the house. We were responding to a 9-1-1 call. My partner and I had been dispatched to an incident of domestic violence. A woman called for help to keep her husband from beating her.	My partner and I were dispatched to a domestic violence incident after a woman dialed 9-1-1. Parker said she was sitting in the family room when her husband went to see who was at the door. Initially her husband refused to answer the door when he heard the man on the other side begin to shout.

Transitional words

Transitions are words or phrases that show relationships between thoughts, sentences, or paragraphs. By selecting appropriate transitional words, officers can help readers move smoothly and logically from detail to detail and sentence to sentence within the investigative report.

The following table suggests only a few of the possible transitional words and phrases officers may use within their reports.

Type of Transition	Words/Phrases	Examples
Time	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Immediately • In the meantime • At the same time • When • Before • Prior to 	Caster said he noticed the door was not completely shut, so he decided to find out why. Immediately after entering the room, he saw the window was broken.

Order	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Finally• In addition• Lastly• First• Then• Further	In addition, Caster saw his laptop computer was not on the desk where he left it the night before.

Concrete vs abstract words

Officers who are writing investigative reports should select simple, common, concrete language whenever possible. The use of simple language can help keep reports concise and brief, addressing relevant information quickly and clearly.

Words that are used to make an investigative report sound eloquent or scholarly may actually serve to make the report wordy, vague and less effective. Inflated language is never appropriate and officers should resist the temptation to impress their readers.

Proofreading

[18.04.EO9]

Introduction

Proofreading may seem time-consuming to both experienced and inexperienced writers. In the case of investigative reports where accuracy, clarity, and completeness are essential, proofreading is critical.

Proofreading content

As noted in chapter one of this workbook, the content of an investigative report must be factual, accurate, clear, concise, complete, and timely (FACCCT).

When proofreading reports, officers should ask themselves:

- is the correct crime(s) cited in the report?
 - are all the elements appropriately articulated?
 - are the facts correct (based on the officer's field notes)?
 - is the report well organized?
 - is all necessary information included?
 - is the information in the proper order?
 - are things said efficiently, or are statements too wordy?
 - are all conclusions supported by facts?
 - are there any gaps in logic?
 - are the names spelled correctly?

Proofreading, Continued

Proofreading mechanics

A report's effectiveness and an officer's credibility can be damaged by a report with too many mechanical errors. When proofreading the reports they have written, officers should look for:

- inappropriate use of the parts of speech (e.g., use of nouns, pronouns verbs, etc.),
- language that may be vague or confusing,
- incorrect or inappropriate use of words,
- spelling errors,
- inappropriate punctuation, and
- incorrect use of law enforcement abbreviations.

NOTE: Additional information is provided in the supplementary materials portion of this workbook.

Reading aloud

Slowly reading a completed report aloud is one of the most effective methods for proofreading the content and mechanics of any document. When sentences are heard, it may be easier for the writer to identify obstacles such as:

- mechanical errors,
 - gaps in logical flow,
 - skewed time sequences,
 - incorrect verb tenses,
 - cumbersome phrasing, etc.

Chapter Synopsis

Learning need Peace officers must recognize that an effective report must exhibit the writer’s command of the language and be relatively free of errors in sentence structure, grammar, and other writing mechanics.

Proper nouns
[18.04.EO1] Persons should be referred to by their proper names to avoid confusion. Once the full name has been used once, the last name may be used when referring to the same person.

First person pronouns
[18.04.EO2] Officers should refer to themselves in the first person (i.e., “I,” “we,” etc.). Use of a person’s name or a third person pronoun is appropriate when referring to another person.

Third person pronouns
[18.04.EO3] When a third person pronoun is used, it must clearly refer to or agree with the noun or proper noun that is directly before it.

Past tense
[18.04.EO4] Past tense verbs should be used to clearly indicate that events have already taken place.

Active voice
[18.04.EO5] The active voice should be used to ensure the information presented is direct, brief, and clearly establishes the actions of the sentence.

Paragraph organization
[18.04.EO6] When writing an investigative report, the first sentence (a lead-in sentence) of each paragraph should clearly state the primary topic of the paragraph.

[18.04.E08]

Officers should not confuse words that sound alike but have differing meanings and spellings.

Proofreading
[18.04.E09]

There are two relatively distinct tasks involved when officers proofread their investigative reports.

Workbook Learning Activities

Introduction

To help you review and apply the material covered in this chapter, a selection of learning activities has been included. No answers are provided. However, by referring to the appropriate text, you should be able to prepare a response.

Activity questions

1. You have just been handed the following narrative from an officer's investigative report. The officer who wrote the report has also asked you to suggest other revisions that would improve the quality and effectiveness of the report. List the recommendations you would make. Identify any specific errors within the report.

On 5-31-99 I was dispatched at 1153 hrs. to 33 "A" Street for a reported theft. I arrived at the address at approx. 1156 hrs. As I got out of my car I could see Mr. Jones waiting on the porch of his apartment waiting for me. As I walked towards Jones I asked him if he was the one who called in the report. He said yes. I asked Jones to tell me what happened. Jones told me he parked his mtn. bike against the stairs of his apartment while he ran into his apartment to fill his water bottle. Jones said he was inside for no more than 5 minutes. When he came out his bike was gone. Jones then gave me a complete description of his bike. I asked his neighbor if she saw anything but she said no.

2. Rewrite each of the following sentences using active voice, first person, or any other modifications necessary to make sure the writer's intent is clear. In all sentences Officer Brown is the reporting officer.
 - a) Officer Brown had been approaching the suspect and at this time he noticed that the woman appeared intoxicated.

 - b) Jones was asked by Brown to describe the gun, and she said that she didn't know much about them, but it was small enough to fit in his waste band.

 - c) Logan was then transported by Brown to jail for booking. During the search procedure, Logan said, I except responsibility for everything but shooting her. I guess I better ask advice from my attorney.

 - d) The suspect was patted down for weapons by Brown's partner. The immediate effect was to cause Russell to exhibit hostile behavior.

 - e) At this time Johnson was being advised of his Miranda options by Brown's partner. The suspect was asked if he understood each right as it was read by him to him. He said yes.

3. Rewrite the following segment from an officer's investigative report. Correct all mechanical errors as well as any other modifications you feel would improve the segment.

On 5/3/99 about 1147 I was dispatch to a report of a petty theft. I talked to Mark Jones. He told me that he went into his home to get some water. When he returned to the past location of his bike, someone stole his bike. It was a mountain bike, red with black trim. He told me that he had seen no one. His neighbor came out and I asked him if he had scene anyone take it but he said no.

Parts of Speech

Introduction

The sentence is the basic structure of written English. It is made up of words that have unique characteristics and functions.

Parts of speech

The eight parts of speech are identified in the following table.

	Description	Examples
Noun	Names a person, place, or thing	The officer stopped the car . The suspect fled from the officers .

Punctuation

Introduction

Punctuation marks give writers a way to achieve some of the effects they would convey in spoken conversations. (i.e., pauses, changes in tone or pitch, inflections, etc.) They can influence the meaning of words, the flow of thought, and the emphasis intended by the writer.

Common punctuation

The following table identifies the most common punctuation marks used within investigative reports.

Mark	Main Uses	Examples
Period (.)	Marks the end of a sentence that is not a question or exclamation	Stewart went to the back of the store and told the manager what she saw.
Comma (,)	Separates items in a series	She reported that a microwave oven, a computer, and a stereo system were missing from the apartment.
	Separates nonessential phrases and clauses from the rest of the sentence	In the meantime, Jones swept up the broken glass.
	Separates two independent clauses in a compound sentence	The victim was in pain, but he was still able to speak with us.
Quotation marks (“ ”)	Indicates the beginning and end of direct quotes	Stanley said, “I just didn’t see the car coming.”

NOTE: Punctuation is generally not placed inside quotation marks. (i.e., commas, periods)

Mark	Main Uses	Examples
Colon (:)	Signals a series is about to follow	The victim reported the following items were missing from the apartment: a microwave oven, a computer, and a stereo system.
Apostrophe (')	To show possession in nouns	The victim's car was totaled.
	To form a contraction	She couldn't tell the direction he came from.

NOTE: The use of contractions in official reports is discouraged except in direct quotes.

NOTE: Usage of semi-colons may be discouraged, please check agency policy and procedures.

Common Law Enforcement Abbreviations

Introduction Peace officers use abbreviations in their notes to expedite time and then write the complete words in their report.

Guidelines for use Abbreviations should be such that the meaning will be readily understood to the person reading the notes. Officers may use abbreviations in their notes but should write the word out for their reports.

Abbreviations containing all capital letters do not require periods (e.g., DMV, CHP).

NOTE: Review agency policies and procedures before using abbreviations.
