THE ACADEMY TRAINING MISSION

The primary mission of basic training is to prepare students mentally, morally, and physically to advance into a field training program, assume the responsibilities, and execute the duties of a peace officer in society.

FOREWORD

The California Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training sincerely appreciates the efforts of the many curriculum consultants, academy instructors, directors and coordinators who contributed to the development of this workbook. We must also thank the California law enforcement agency executives who allowed their personnel to participate in the development of these training materials.

This student workbook is part of the POST Basic Course Training System. The workbook component of this system provides a self-study document for every learning domain in the Basic Course. Each workbook is intended to be a supplement to, not a substitute for, classroom instruction. The objective of the system is to improve academy student learning and information retention and ultimately contribute to you becoming a peace officer committed to safety, and to the communities you will serve.

The content of each workbook is organized into sequenced learning modules to meet requirements as prescribed both by California law and the POST Training and Testing Specifications for the Basic Course.

It is our hope that the collective wisdom and experience of all who contributed to this workbook will help you, the student, to successfully complete the Basic Course and to enjoy a safe and rewarding career as a peace officer.

Introduction

Student workbooks

The student workbooks are part of the POST Basic Course Instructional System. This system is designed to provide students with a self-study document to be used in preparation for classroom training.

Regular Basic Course training requirement

Completion of the Regular Basic Course is required, prior to exercising peace officer powers, as recognized in the California Penal Code and where the POST-required standard is the POST Regular Basic Course.

Student workbook elements

The following elements are included in each workbook:

- chapter contents, including a synopsis of key points,
 - supplementary material, and
 - a glossary of terms used in this workbook.

How to Use the Student Workbook

Introduction

This workbook provides an introduction to the training requirements for this Learning Domain. It is intended to be used in several ways: for initial learning prior to classroom attendance, for test preparation, and for remedial training.

Workbook format

To use the workbook most effectively, follow the steps listed below.

Step	Action
1	Begin by reading the: Preface and How to Use the Workbook, which provide an overview of how the workbook fits into the POST Instructional System and how it should be used.
2	Refer to the Chapter Synopsis section at the end of each chapter to review the key points that support the chapter objectives.
3	Read the text.
4	Complete the Workbook Learning Activities at the end of each chapter. These activities reinforce the material taught in the chapter.
5	Refer to the Glossary section for a definition of important terms. The terms appear throughout the text and are bolded and underlined the first time they appear (e.g., term).

Child Harm, Injury or Endangerment

Introduction

Physical abuse of a child is an act in which a person willfully causes or permits a child to suffer, inflicts unjustifiable pain or mental suffering, or allows a child in his or her care or custody to be placed in a dangerous situation.

Policing in the community

Children who witness violence in the home are at great risk of being the victims of violence themselves or of resorting to violence in defense of an abusive parent. There are a variety of community resources and social service workers who can help in the attempt to break the cycle of violence. Every effort to intervene in high-risk cases is worth making. A partnership including law enforcement, schools, public social service agencies, and non-profit organizations is often the best way to attempt to save children from harm.

Leadership

Many laws have been enacted to protect children from strangers and caregivers. Children suffer from neglect in a number of basic areas including food, clothing, and medical care, and they sometimes lack the emotional care and love they need. Suspects and witnesses in these investigations can be highly emotional and peace officers must be sensitive to the situation.

Some officers may feel rage and the desire for revenge. These feelings cannot be brushed away, nor can they be acted upon. They have to be managed and the officer must act within the confines of reason and the law.

Penal code section

Child harm, injury or endangerment is covered under Penal Code Section 273a.

Child Harm, Injury or Endangerment, Continued

Crime elements

To arrest a subject for the crime of child harm, injury or endangerment, the necessary crime elements include:

- any person
- willfully causing or permitting any child to suffer, or
- inflicting unjustifiable physical pain or mental suffering, or
- having the care or custody of any child, and
- willfully causing or permitting that child to be placed in such a situation that his or her person or health is endangered.

NOTE: This is a general intent crime. Even though willfulness is an element, specific intent to harm, injure, endanger, or cause suffering is not a required element of this crime. It may be sufficient to prove criminal negligence.

Classification

The crime of child harm, injury, or endangerment is either a felony or misdemeanor, depending upon the circumstances or conditions in which the child was placed. The table below shows the distinction between felony and misdemeanor offenses.

Description	Crime Classification	Penal Code Section
Circumstances or conditions likely to produce great bodily harm or death to the child.	felony	273a(a)
Circumstances or conditions other than those likely to produce great bodily harm or death to the child.	misdemeanor	273a(b)
Assault on a child under the age of 8 which results in death.	felony	273ab

Related terms

To understand the crime of child harm, injury, or endangerment, peace officers need to become familiar with the following terms:

Permit means to allow a situation to happen.

A child is defined to be any person under 18 years of age.

Criminal negligence is flagrant and reckless disregard for the safety of others or willful indifference to any injury that might occur. Such acts are punishable as crimes themselves if injury or death occurs.

Great bodily injury is significant or substantial injury.

Examples

Example: A mother left her infant in an unventilated vehicle on a 90-degree day while she ran into the supermarket. She has committed the crime of child harm, injury, or endangerment.

Example: A father left dangerous drugs in an area accessible to a child. He has committed the crime of child harm, injury, or endangerment.

Example: An adult baby sitter was angry at the 7-year-old for whom she was caring. She punished him by making him stand in a closed closet knowing he was afraid of the dark. She has committed the crime of child harm, injury, or endangerment.

Corporal Punishment or Injury of Child

Introduction Physical abuse of a child is any willful act of physical force that causes corporal injury to a child.

Penal code section Corporal punishment or injury of child is covered under Penal Code Section 273d(a).

Crime elements To arrest a subject for the crime of corporal punishment or injury of child, the necessary crime elements include:

- any person who,
- willfully inflicts upon any child,
- any cruel or inhuman, corporal punishment or an injury,
- resulting in a traumatic condition.

NOTE: This is a general intent crime. Even though willfulness is an element, specific intent to cause injury is not a required element of this crime. It may be sufficient to prove criminal negligence.

Classification Corporal punishment or injury of child is a felony.

Parental discipline It is not the intent of the criminal justice system to prevent parents from engaging in reasonable physical discipline of their children. It is considered to be lawful for parents to reasonably discipline their children, including reasonable use of corporal punishment.

Related terms To understand the crime of physical abuse of a child, peace officers need to become familiar with the following terms:

Corporal punishment is any kind of punishment inflicted on the body.

Corporal Punishment or Injury of Child, Continued

A traumatic condition is defined in Penal Code Section 273.5 to be a condition of the body, such as a wound or external or internal injury, whether of a minor or a serious nature, caused by physical force. Several court cases have upheld that this definition does apply to crimes committed under Penal Code Section 273d(a).

Cruel or inhuman punishment is any punishment that is considered to be torture or barbaric, or any punishment that is so disproportionate that it shocks the moral sense of the community.

NOTE: There is no list of crimes that constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Willful injury alone is sufficient to fulfill this element of child abuse.

Examples

Example: A father whipped his son with a belt with such force that the next day the school nurse saw redness and the outline of a belt on the son's back. The father has committed the crime of physical abuse of a child.

Example: An adult babysitter attempted to teach a child not to play with matches. She held a match to a child's hand until a welt was raised. She has committed the crime of corporal punishment or injury of child.

Lewd or Lascivious Acts with a Child

Introduction Lewd or lascivious acts with a child means any act upon or with a child committed with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying sexual desire of the perpetrator or the child.

Penal code section Lewd or lascivious acts with a child is covered under Penal Code Section 288.

Crime elements To arrest a subject for the crime of lewd or lascivious acts with a child, the necessary crime elements must include:

- any person
- willfully committing any lewd or lascivious act
- upon or with the body of a child, with
- the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying one’s sexual desires or those of the child, when
- the child is under 14 (Penal Code Section 288(a))
- or
- the child is 14 or 15 and the suspect is 10 or more years older than the victim. (Penal Code Section 288(c)(1))

NOTE: A sexual part need not be touched to complete the crime. The act must simply be sexual in nature with intent to arouse either the subject or the child.

NOTE: It need not be bare skin that is touched. Touching through clothing can complete the crime.

NOTE: It also includes victims being compelled to touch themselves.

Classification

The crime of lewd or lascivious acts with a child is a felony.

Related terms

To understand the crime of lewd or lascivious acts with a child, peace officers need to become familiar with the following terms.

A lascivious act is any act which has a tendency to excite lust.

A lewd act is one which is committed with a disregard of social constraints.

Upon or with the body of a child means that a child's body or clothing is touched.

Annoying or Molesting Children

Introduction Annoying or molesting children is any act committed against a person under the age of 18 which would annoy any reasonable person.

Penal code section Annoying or molesting children is covered under Penal Code Section 647.6.

Crime elements To arrest a subject for the crime of annoying or molesting children, the necessary crime elements include:

- any person
- annoying or molesting
- any child under the age of 18.

NOTE: This is a general intent crime. It is not necessary to prove that subjects intended to annoy or molest, merely that they intended to commit the annoying act.

NOTE: Touching is not a required element of this crime. The offense can be words alone.

Classification Annoying or molesting children is a misdemeanor.

It can also be classified as a felony under specific subsections of Penal Code Section 647.6.

It can also be classified as a misdemeanor under Penal Code Section 647.6(a)(2).

Possession of Child Pornography

Introduction Possession of child pornography is an act in which a person knowingly possesses or controls material showing a person under the age of 18 years engaging in or simulating sexual conduct.

Penal code section The possession of child pornography is covered under Penal Code Section 311.11.

Crime elements To arrest a subject for the crime of possession of child pornography the necessary crime elements include:

- knowingly possesses, or
- controls any matter,
- showing a child under the age of 18 years,
- engaging in or simulating sexual conduct.

NOTE: Peace officers must remember that nudity is not necessarily lewd, and they should pay close attention to what is defined as sexual conduct by Penal Code Section 311.4(d). In the same way, nudity is not required for an act to be considered lewd or pornographic.

NOTE: Penal Code Section 311.11(c) establishes that it is not necessary to prove that the matter is obscene in order to establish a violation.

Classification The crime of possession of child pornography Penal Code Section 311.11(a) is classified as a felony.

Violation of Penal Code Section 311.11(a) with a previous conviction falls under Penal Code Section 311.11(b) and is a felony.

Workbook Learning Activities

Introduction

To help you review and apply the material covered in this chapter, a selection of learning activities has been included. No answers are provided. However, by referring to the appropriate text, you should be able to prepare a response.

Activity questions

1. A peace officer is directed by a concerned parent to a woman handing out pamphlets on the street. The pamphlets show a graphic depiction of a male and a female, who appear to be teenagers, demonstrating how to use a condom. The topic of the pamphlet is safe sex. Can the woman be arrested for possession of child pornography? Why or why not? If she is passing out the pamphlets specifically to young teens, is she committing any other crime against children?

2. What crime elements distinguish the crime of physical abuse of a child from the crime of annoying or molesting children? Under what circumstances is each crime a felony?

3. A 30-year-old male flees in his vehicle during a routine traffic stop. When the vehicle is stopped after a high-speed chase, the officers discover an unrestrained 2-year-old toddler crying in the back seat. In addition to any other crimes associated with the traffic stop and his flight, what, if any, crimes against children may have taken place?

4. A 35-year-old woman masturbates in her bedroom in front of her son's 13-year-old male friend. The friend states that he likes the experience and asks if he can watch again sometime. Given the attitude of the young man, has any crime against children been committed? Why or why not?

7. A peace officer is dispatched to a large protest at a local bookstore. The protest leader shows the peace officer a book that is offered for sale in the store. The book contains photographs of nude male and female children, alone and together, sometimes hugging. Some of the boys are depicted with erections. The protest leader wants the store owner arrested and the book removed from the store. Is the book child pornography? Should the officer arrest the store owner and remove the books? If so, what is the charge?

Reporting Requirements

Introduction

Penal Code Section 11166 mandates that certain professional occupations are required to report suspected child abuse to the proper authority. There are certain requirements for how and when reporting must be completed.

Professionals responsible for reporting suspected child abuse

Several professionals are required by law (Penal Code Section 11166) to report any incident of which they have direct knowledge, or if they have observed a child that they know or reasonably suspect has been a victim of child abuse. These professionals include:

- child care custodians (including teachers and peace officers),
- health practitioners (medical and non-medical),
- employees of child protective agencies,
- child visitation monitors,
- firefighters,
- clergy (except when in confessional),
- animal control officers,
- humane society officers, and
- commercial film processors.

NOTE: Throughout this section, the professional who reports the child abuse incident will be referred to as “the reporter.”

Related terms

To understand reporting requirements, peace officers need to become familiar with the following terms.

Child care custodian is an employee who has direct contact and supervision of children including, but not limited to:

- those working in public and private schools, youth centers, youth recreation programs or organizations, child care facilities, foster homes, group homes, residential care facilities,
- social workers,
- probation officers,
- parole officers,
- peace officers,
- including peace officers at schools. (Penal Code Section 11165.7)

Health practitioner is a physician, surgeon, psychiatrist, psychologist, dentist, resident, intern, podiatrist, chiropractor, licensed nurse, dental hygienist, optometrist, or any other person who is licensed under the Business and Professions Code Division 2.

Reasonable suspicion means that it is objectively reasonable for a person to entertain a suspicion, based upon facts that could cause a person in a like position, drawing when appropriate on his or her training and experience, to suspect child abuse. (Penal Code Section 11166(a))

Contacting child protective agency

Once a reporter knows or has reasonable suspicion a child is a victim of child abuse, he or she shall immediately, or as soon as possible, contact a child protective agency by telephone.

A child protective agency means a county welfare department (e.g., Department of Social Services, Department of Child Services, Child Welfare Services), a county probation department, or a police or sheriff's department. It does not include school district police or a security department.

Conducting the investigation Depending on the relationship of the suspected abuser to the child, different child protective agencies may also conduct a separate investigation of the case.

Follow-up reporting A report shall be prepared, written, and sent to the child protective agency within 36 hours of the initial contact.

A report shall be sent even if the child has died; even though the suspected abuse may not have been a contributing factor to the death.

Reporting responsibilities In the interest of cross reporting, a county probation or welfare agency shall immediately, or as soon as practical, report by telephone suspected incidents of child abuse. It shall contact the:

- child protective agency having jurisdiction over the case and/or
 - district attorney's office.

Content of report

When initially reporting a suspected child abuse incident and submitting the follow-up written report, the following information shall be included. Further details of the content of the written report will vary with the circumstances.

For the telephone report	For the written report
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Name and age of child - Name of the reporter - Location of child - Nature and extent of injuries - Current condition of child - Facts which lead to reasonable suspicion that abuse has occurred. 	Fact-sensitive information including: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - name and age of child, - name of the reporter, - location of child, - nature and extent of injuries, - condition of child when abuse was reported, - facts which lead to the suspicion of abuse, - relationship to suspected abuser, - nature of suspected abuse (i.e., sexual, physical, etc.), and - history of previous abuse.

NOTE: For an example of forms that may be used for taking a report of suspected child abuse, see the Supplement Materials section in this workbook.

Penal code section

Failure to report a suspected child abuse is covered in Penal Code Section 11166(b).

Crime elements

A professional required to report a child abuse who does not report a suspected child abuse which they know to exist, or reasonably should know to exist.

Classifications Failure to report suspected child abuse is a misdemeanor.

Immunity from liability Penal Code Section 11172 states that anyone who reports a suspected child abuse incident shall not incur civil or criminal liability for any report required or authorized. This means that if a reporter files a report in good faith, he or she cannot be sued or arrested for the report's contents (even if the contents turn out to be wrong).

However, if one knowingly files a false report, he or she can incur civil or criminal liability for damages caused as a result.

Confidentiality for Reporting Party

Introduction The general public is often reluctant to get involved in reporting suspected child abuse because of the possible angry reaction of the suspected abuser. To encourage reporting and as a means to protect the reporter from any publicity or from negative attention by the suspected abuser, the identity of the person making the report shall remain confidential.

Confidentiality Penal Code Section 11167 ensures that the identity of the person reporting a suspected child abuse incident shall be confidential (this includes the reporter's employer).

Only the following will have access to the reporter's identity:

- Child protective agency investigating the case
 - Counsel representing a child protective agency
 - District attorney in a criminal prosecution
 - Licensing agency when abuse in out-of-home care is suspected
 - Others pursuant to a court order

Confidentiality of reports

Penal Code Section 11167.5 mandates that the reports shall be confidential and may be disclosed only to the following organizations:

- investigating agency
 - Department of Justice when working with child protective agencies
 - multi-disciplinary personnel
 - persons responsible for licensing of facilities that care for children
 - State Department of Social Services
 - hospital scan teams
 - coroners and medical examiners when conducting a postmortem examination on a child
 - Board of Prison Terms
 - personnel from an agency responsible for making a placement of a child
 - persons identified by the Department of Justice as listed in the Child Abuse Central Index (Penal Code Section 11170(c))
 - out-of-state law enforcement agencies conducting an investigation of child abuse or neglect
 - persons who have verified with the Department of Justice that they are listed in the Child Abuse Central Index (Penal Code Section 11170(e))
 - each chairperson of a county child death review team

Penal code section

Failure to maintain confidentiality is covered in Penal Code Section 11167.5.

Crime elements

Any violation of the confidentiality of the identity of the reporter and/or the report itself shall be considered a misdemeanor.

Classification

Failure to keep the identity of the reporter confidential is a misdemeanor.

Warrantless Entry to Protect Minors

Overview

Learning need Peace officers have the authority to make a warrantless entry into a home whenever they reasonably believe a minor is in immediate danger of being physically abused, neglected, or sexually exploited.

Learning objectives The chart below identifies the student learning objectives for this chapter.

After completing study of this chapter, the student will be able to:	Objective ID
<ul style="list-style-type: none">recognize the legal basis for entry without a warrant to protect a minor.	9.03.1
<ul style="list-style-type: none">recognize the exigent circumstances that could lead an officer to reasonably believe that there is an immediate threat to a minor.	9.03.2

In this chapter This chapter focuses on the legality of entering and intervening without a warrant. Refer to the following chart for specific topics.

Warrant vs. Warrantless Entry	3-2
Chapter Synopsis	3-9
Workbook Learning Activities	3-10

Warrant vs Warrantless Entry

Introduction

When peace officers receive information that a minor needs to be removed from the premises because the minor is endangered, but not in IMMEDIATE danger, the officers need to obtain a warrant. The warrant allows the officers to legally enter the premises.

- NOTE: Before peace officers enter, they need to comply with Penal Code Section 1531 (knock and notice).

Conditions restricting entry

A peace officer is not permitted inside a residence without:

- a warrant, or
 - exigent circumstances, or
 - valid consent from the occupant.

Warrantless entry requirements

Without a warrant or valid consent, peace officers may enter the premises ONLY when there are exigent circumstances. A reasonable suspicion that a minor is presently endangered is ONE TYPE of exigent circumstance.

Exigent circumstances

Exigent circumstance means an emergency situation requiring swift action to prevent:

- imminent danger to a person's life or safety,
- serious damage to property,
- imminent escape of a suspect, or
- evidence is about to be destroyed or removed.

NOTE: Endangerment can encompass a great variety of meanings for children depending on the circumstances of events (i.e., age, neglect, abuse, abandonment, unsafe environment)

Warrantless entry

Peace officers must consider the quality of information relied upon to reach the conclusion that there is an exigent circumstance.

In People v. Brown (1970) 12 Cal.App.3d 600, the peace officer intervened based upon a reasonable suspicion of sexual abuse upon an incapacitated victim.

The Facts	The Court Ruling
A police detective received an urgent phone call from a minor male that his severely disabled sister was being sexually molested, right then by their father, at their home. The detective, who had been to the home on at least five occasions and knew the caller personally, then met with him to hear more details before proceeding to the house. In addition, the detective had previously been informed by a probation officer, who was working with the family, about prior acts of sexuality in the household between the father and this same daughter. Based on the totality of the circumstances known to the officer, it was reasonable for him to believe that a helpless female victim was being assaulted. Therefore, it was reasonable for him to enter the house without a warrant or consent to prevent or interrupt a serious felony.	The right of privacy and domestic security extends no impenetrable protective cloak against the prevention of a felonious assault upon a helpless victim. The victim's right to physical and mental integrity outweighs the right of the aggressor to remain secure in his domestic sanctuary.

Peace officers must consider the safety of the juvenile when deciding to enter the premises without a warrant.

In re Dawn O. (1976) 58 Cal.App.3d 160, the courts decided the facts reasonably indicated that an unattended child (neglect) constitutes a substantial threat to his or her safety. The details of the case are described below.

The Case	The Court Ruling
The police officer took a 5-year-old child back home at 10:30 pm. The officer knocked on the door but got no response. The police officer entered the residence in an attempt to determine whether there was another child alone in the house not for the purpose of securing the residence.	The court ruled that, under the circumstance, it was reasonable to determine if a child had been left home in a dangerous circumstance.

In People v. Sutton (1976) 65 Cal.App.3d 341, a peace officer had to determine whether the child was under the care of a responsible adult (endangerment of a minor in a private dwelling).

The Facts	The Court Ruling
At 2:00 am., a peace officer received reliable information from a citizen-informant that two small children had been left alone in a named apartment unit. At the apartment, in which lights and the TV were on, no one responded to the officer's repeated knocking. Over 10 minutes later, a female drove up and started to enter the apartment with a key. The officer observed that she was very intoxicated, and that there was considerable trash and dirty clothes strewn about the kitchen area, and a baby bottle in the living room. Concluding that the woman's condition made her unable to care for small children, the peace officer entered the apartment and found two infants, 6 and 16 months old, alone in the bedroom.	The court held that there is no special or different rule regarding warrantless entries to the purpose of protecting infant children. Rather, the definition of exigencies is always the same; there must be "an imminent and substantial threat to life, health, or property." The information known to this peace officer justified his warrantless entry to prevent or interrupt apparent child-neglect and/or child-endangerment.

In People v. Payne (1977) 65 Cal.App.3d 679, the court ruled that the officers' warrantless entry into a private dwelling was justified by exigent circumstances, which included prior reliable information about the suspect.

The Facts	The Court Ruling
Following reports from a reliable informant that the defendant molested children in a bedroom in his garage, police set up surveillance in which the defendant was seen picking up a male juvenile and driving him to the garage. The peace officers repeatedly knocked and announced they were conducting a child molestation investigation. When the defendant did not respond, the peace officers reasonably believed, despite the absence of any call for help by the juvenile, that an emergency situation had arisen in which a particularly heinous crime was being committed.	The court ruled that police officers, in forcing open a door in the defendant's bedroom, acted lawfully under the doctrine of exigent circumstances. Therefore, they did not violate the defendant's right to privacy or domestic security.

In People v. Miller (1999) 69 Cal.App.4th 190, the peace officer made a warrantless entry into a home to determine if a 2-year-old wandering in the neighborhood could be safely reunited with his parents and siblings.

The Case	The Court Ruling
A 2-year-old boy was found wandering in a neighborhood. A couple took custody of the boy and was also told by another woman that she had seen the boy wandering on a previous occasion. A peace officer responded to the boy's home and found the front door ajar. The peace officer pushed open the door and announced himself several times but got no answer. He then entered the residence and found the boy's father inside. The father said he had been asleep and didn't know where his wife and kids were. The peace officer searched the residence with the father's consent and located explosives and other contraband.	The father moved to suppress evidence located in the house that was found by the peace officer because he believed the warrantless search was illegal. The court ruled that the exigency was clear. It was proper for the peace officer to enter the residence "to determine if the parents and siblings were home, if they were in need of assistance, and whether the child could be safely reunited with them."

Examples

Example: A peace officer received a reliable report from a citizen that an infant was being left in an apartment unattended. The peace officer knocked on the apartment door and received no response, but he heard an infant crying. The peace officer could lawfully force entry without a warrant or consent to determine the welfare and safety of the child.

Example: A peace officer walked past an apartment and heard a child screaming “Daddy stop hitting me.” The officer heard sounds consistent with a person being assaulted. The officer believed the child was in immediate danger. He had the authority to enter and determine the welfare and safety of the child.

Violation of constitution

It is the intrusion into the dwelling that offends the constitution. Therefore, it is essential that peace officers make sure that they enter only under exigent circumstances, or when they have a warrant or valid consent.

NOTE: For additional information regarding exigent circumstances refer to LD 16: Search and Seizure.

Statutory Definitions of Child Abuse

Introduction

It is generally accepted that child abuse is the leading cause of childhood deaths in the United States. Many children do not know that what is happening to them is wrong, or they may be too frightened to say anything. Recognition of possible abuse and a thorough investigation leading to the identification and conviction of the abuser may be the only thing that frees children from their abuse.

Statutory definition

Penal Code Section 11165.6 defines child abuse as:

- a physical injury,
- which is inflicted by other than accidental means,
- on a child,
- by another person.

The statute further expands this definition to include other acts, such as:

- sexual abuse of a child,
 - neglect,
 - willful cruelty or unjustifiable punishment of a child,
 - unlawful corporal punishment or injury, or
 - neglect or abuse in out-of-home care.

Extent of child abuse

The number of reported cases of child abuse and neglect has been increasing steadily in the past several years. This trend may be due to:

- an actual increase in the number of children being abused,
 - the increase in public awareness regarding child abuse,
 - a greater number of individuals who are willing to report suspected child abuse, or
 - a combination of all three.

Statutory Definitions of Child Abuse, Continued

Extent
of child abuse

NOTE: Surveys consistently give reason to believe that the actual number of incidents involving child abuse and neglect is much greater than the number of cases that are reported and investigated.

Victim
age levels

Statistical data indicates that many of the victims of reported abuse and neglect are under the age of four years.

It is likely, however, that those statistics may not accurately reflect the extent of adolescent abuse. Abuse of adolescents may be overlooked or bypassed because an adolescent may be considered to be less “at risk” or not as helpless as a younger child. It may be falsely presumed that adolescents have more options (e.g., leave until a parent or care giver “calms down”) or that they are more capable of defending themselves by “fighting back.”

Investigating officers must recognize that adolescent abuse is just as serious as the abuse of a younger child and deserves the same attention.

Abusers

Peace officers must guard against bias or a preconceived idea of a “typical” child abuser. Child abuse occurs in all cultural, ethnic, occupational, and socioeconomic groups. An abuser could be anyone from any walk of life.

Abuse by a total stranger is probably the lowest percentage of all abuses. Some of the most serious cases of abuse occurs in families that may appear to be well adjusted, normal, everyday people. If the abuser is someone perceived to be of high standing in the community, the children may endure prolonged abuse before anyone is willing to believe.

Abusers (continued)

Children can become victims of abuse by:

- a single parent's boy/girlfriend,
 - parents,
 - family members,
 - neighbors,
 - family friends,
 - care givers (e.g., baby sitters, day care workers, etc.),
 - someone the child has a nonparental relationship with (e.g., scout leader, coach, teacher, etc.),
 - men or women,
 - adults, adolescents, or
 - even other children.

Physical and Behavioral Indicators

Introduction

Statistics have shown that abusers of children typically repeat the abuse and increase its frequency. Early identification, reporting, and intervention are essential to protect the child from future permanent injury or death.

Categories of child abuse

In the past, the decision to intervene was based solely on the degree of physical injury while subtle, less visible injuries were overlooked. Peace officers must recognize that all categories of abuse can endanger or impair a child's physical or emotional health and development.

The following table identifies the primary categories of child abuse of which officers should be aware.

Category	Definition/Description
Physical child abuse	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Any action which results in a nonaccidental physical injury• Intentional, deliberate assaults such as, but not limited to:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- excessive spanking- punching, slapping, or kicking- twisting limbs- burning- biting- cutting- poking

Indicators of abuse

The abuse of a child may surface through a broad range of physical, behavioral, and/or social indicators. Some of these indicators, taken separately, may not be symptomatic of abuse. All indicators should be examined in the context of other behaviors and situational factors.

Indicators of physical child abuse

The presence of unexplained, inconsistent, and/or incompatible injuries may initiate questioning, observing, or examining a child for further indications of physical abuse. The primary target zone of infliction of injuries is the back surface of the body from the neck to the knees. Such injuries constitute the largest percentage of identified physical abuse.

The following table identifies possible indicators of suspected physical child abuse.

Physical Child Abuse
Behavioral indicators	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Easily frightened or fearful• Wary of adult contacts• Fear of parent/care giver, etc.• Fear of going home• Excessively passive or withdrawn• Vacant or frozen stare; monosyllable responses• Aggressive behavior toward other children, animals, toys, etc.• Frequently absent from school, physical education classes, etc.• Inappropriate or excessive clothing to cover bruises

Indicators of physical neglect of a child

If a parent or other individual who is legally responsible for a child fails to provide a minimum level of physical support for that child, government must then take responsibility for the welfare of the child.

The following table identifies a number of indicators that may be present in chronic cases of physical neglect of a child.

Physical Neglect of a Child
Behavioral indicators	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Depression, withdrawal, or apathy• Antisocial or destructive behavior• Constant fatigue• Exaggerated fearfulness• Sleep, speech, eating, or habit disorders (e.g., biting, rocking)• Seeks excessive attention and/or affection• Delayed emotional or mental development

Indicators of mental suffering

Mental suffering can be seen as a self-fulfilling prophecy. If a child is degraded enough, the child will begin to live up to the image communicated by the abusing parent or care giver. Mental suffering cases can be extremely difficult to prove and require documentation by witnesses over an extended period of time.

The following table presents a number of indicators that may help peace officers identify cases involving mental suffering.

Mental Suffering
Behavioral indicators	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Poor self-esteem• Antisocial behavior (e.g., aggression, disruption)• Depression, withdrawal, or apathy• Abnormally unresponsive, sad, or withdrawn• Constantly seeking out or “pestering” other adults for attention and affection• Exaggerated fears• Acting inappropriately adult or infantile• Obvious “delinquent” behavior (e.g., drug abuse, vandalism)
Physical indicators	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Frail appearance, shallow, empty facial expressions• Refusal to eat adequate amounts of food• Inability to perform normal learned functions for the given age (e.g., walking, talking, etc.)• Eating disorders

Indicators of sexual child abuse

A pedophile is an individual who prefers sexual contact with children and whose sexual fantasies and erotic imagery focus on children. Sexual abuse of children is believed to be more common than physical abuse. Although there are indicators, a number of child victims will repress the effects of child abuse and carry them into adulthood.

The following table identifies a number of behavioral and physical indicators that may be exhibited by a child who has been sexually abused.

Sexual Child Abuse
Behavioral indicators		<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Age-inappropriate understanding of sexual behavior • Inappropriate, unusual, or aggressive sexual behavior • Compulsive indiscreet masturbation • Excessive curiosity about sexual matters or genitalia • Unusually seductive with classmates, teachers, or other adults • Frightened of parents, care giver, or of going home
	Younger children	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Bed wetting, fecal soiling • Unusual fears or phobias • Overly compulsive behavior • Overrating/underrating • Significant change in academic performance • Drastic behavior changes in and out of parent's/care giver's presence • Sleep or speech disorders

Physical indicators	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Torn, stained, bloody underclothing • Scars, injuries, or irritations in vaginal, anal, or external genitalia areas (i.e., pain, itching, swelling, bruising, bleeding, lacerations, etc.) • Pain upon urination or defecation • Difficulty in walking or standing due to genital or anal pain • General discharge or infection • Bite marks on genitalia • Pregnancy • Sexually transmitted diseases

NOTE: Violence may not be the goal of a pedophile, so physical indicators may not be present.

Conducting an Interview with a Child Victim

Introduction The actions taken by peace officers during a preliminary investigation coupled with the quality of the investigative report will have a crucial bearing on the safety and protection of the child and the successful prosecution of the abuser.

Temporary protective custody If the safety and welfare of a minor is threatened in any way because the minor is a potential victim of abuse, peace officers have the authority to take the minor into temporary protective custody. (Welfare and Institutions Code Section 305)

The following table identifies the situations under which a peace officer may take such action.

Peace officers may take a minor into protective custody if...	Welfare and Institutions Code Section

Victim interviews

Patience is very important when dealing with children, especially those who have been betrayed by adults. Whenever officers interview a victim of abuse, the primary objective should be to determine the truth of the allegation(s) without further traumatizing the child. Regardless of the age of the victim, effective interviewing requires that you remain neutral, give the child his or her voice, and show respect.

The following table describes each component of the victim interview process.

Action	Additional Information
Control the interview conditions/environment	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Determine who will conduct the interview ahead of time.• Plan and prepare the interview carefully.• Be aware of the child's relationship with the suspect.• Interview each victim separately.• Select a quiet, comfortable setting that is private and away from distractions.• Have support persons available, if needed.• Consider use of audio or video recordings to minimize the number of times the victim is interviewed.
Build rapport	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Take time to gain the child's confidence.• Provide emotional support and comfort.• Establish the child's developmental level and capabilities to be interviewed by considering the:<ul style="list-style-type: none">- child's age,- child's ability to evaluate and articulate,- child's ability to differentiate between the truth and a lie, and right from wrong, and- impact the interview may have on the child.

Action	Additional Information
Use appropriate communication techniques	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Use simple terminology. • Avoid legal jargon. • Use a calm understanding tone of voice. • Sit at eye-level with the child. • Make eye contact, but do not stare at the child. • Avoid wearing sunglasses. • Avoid over reactions or negative reactions to any of the child's statements. • Use the same terms the child uses when referring to genitalia or parts of the body. • Listen patiently and do not rush the child. • Remain neutral; show empathy and concern, but do not take sides. • Be sensitive to the fact that the child's attention span is dependent on the child's age and maturity.
Gather information	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Explain why the interview is being conducted and why the questions are being asked. • Explain that the child is not responsible or at fault for what has happened. • Avoid leading questions that may plant ideas in the child's mind. • Limit questions to "who," "what," "where," "when," and "how many." • Avoid asking "why" questions that may imply that the child is at fault.

Gather information (continued)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If the child pauses for an extended period of time, encourage the child to continue (e.g., “And then what happened?”). • Encourage the child to use dolls, drawings, and/or other visual props to communicate experiences.
Conclude the interview	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Tell the child what will happen next (e.g., forensic medical exam). • Do not make false promises or create unrealistic expectations as to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - apprehension of the suspect or - when the officer will get back to the victim or victim’s parents/care giver.

NOTE: When conducting the interview, officers should be aware that although children want the abuse to end, they may not be seeking to have an abuser punished.

Evidence consideration

The collection of physical evidence can be critically important to substantiating the alleged child abuse. Examples of potential evidence officers may consider are noted in the following table.

Evidence	Examples
Statements	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Statements from victims, witnesses, reporting party, and/or suspect.
Injuries	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Photographs of injuries • Past medical records indicating previous abuse • Biological evidence (e.g., blood, semen, etc.)

Forensic medical examination

Welfare and Institutions Code Section 324.5 states when:

- a minor child is taken into protective custody,
- related to allegations of sexual abuse,
- the peace officer can authorize a forensic medical exam,
- if the parent or guardian refuses or is unable to authorize the exam.

In cases involving sexual child abuse, if it is known or suspected that penetration or an exchange of biological fluids occurred, officers should immediately arrange to have the child transported to a designated medical facility for a forensic medical examination. Peace officers have the same responsibility regarding this examination as they do with the medical examination related to adult sexual assault cases.

Victims of severe physical abuse or neglect may require a forensic medical examination in order to obtain critical evidence of the abuse.

Arrest of a suspect

The responding officers must determine if a suspect should be arrested at the time of the preliminary investigation. This decision should be based on factors such as:

- probable cause,
- the nature of the offense (e.g., felony, misdemeanor),
- safety of the victim or witnesses,
- potential ramifications of the arrest,
- imminent danger to the community,
- likelihood the suspect will attempt to flee,
- the possible destruction of evidence (on the suspect or the suspect's belongings), and/or
- prior instances of abuse.

Even if the suspect is arrested, the responding officers must evaluate the safety of the victim or the victim's sibling(s) and determine if temporary protective custody is warranted. Officers should keep in mind that the suspect may be released on bail and return to the home or area.

NOTE: For additional information regarding obtaining criminal histories and previous incidents of child abuse, refer to LD 36: Information Systems.

Chapter Synopsis

Learning need Ensuring the safety of a child victim is a peace officer's primary responsibility when responding to a case of suspected child abuse. To do this effectively, officers must be able to recognize indicators of abuse, conduct a preliminary investigation into abuse, and take the appropriate action.

Statutory definitions Penal Code Section 11165.6 defines child abuse as:

[9.04.1]

- a physical injury,
 - which is inflicted by other than accidental means,
 - on a child,
 - by another person.

Physical and behavioral indicators All types of abuse and neglect inflicted on a child have specific physical and behavioral indicators.

[9.04.2]

Conducting an interview with a child victim When interviewing a child victim of abuse, officers should:

[9.04.3]

- maintain control of the interview conditions/environment.
 - take the time to build rapport and gain the child's confidence.
 - use communication techniques that are appropriate for the child's age and maturity.
 - gather information regarding "who", "what", "where", "when", and "how many".
 - conclude the interview by explaining what will happen next.

5. A woman reported that her daughter's 8-year-old friend, Tiffany, may have been sexually abused. She says the child told her that her uncle took pictures of her without her clothes on. How should officers respond? Should an officer interview the girl without contacting her parents first? Why or why not? If you were the officer interviewing the child, what strategies might you use to build rapport and gain accurate information? List five specific questions you would ask, being careful to phrase the questions for an 8-year-old.
